Color and tone are determined by the program's set of photo-realistic tools, which can be applied automatically to virtually any footage. The program offers in-depth color grading for TV, film and other multimedia production, from low-end video editing, to high-end post-production. When it comes to the quality of an editing program, Avid's suite is virtually unbeatable. It has some of the finest tools and features available on any editing program, and has the largest library of third-party plug-ins of any editing program. I like using this software for very simple videos and even for a little bit of more advanced editing. It's simple to use and you can fit all the features that you need right into a small toolbar. This program is not for advanced video editors, but for someone who has to do a lot of very basic editing or someone who is just getting into the world of video editing. I just started with this.
